Introduction

Whether it occurs face-to-face or via mediated technologies at the interpersonal, group, organizational, institutional, (inter)cultural/societal, or international/global level, communication has tremendous potential to affect people (both in positive and negative ways). Applied communication research (ACR) is the study of whether and how communication makes such an impact.

More specifically, this course explores how scholars study practices, processes, and products that are associated with them and others (e.g., practitioners and laypeople) employing communication concepts, principles, theories, methods, interventions/facilitations, pedagogies, and other practices to address important problems, issues, and/or concerns that confront individuals, dyads, groups, organizations, institutions, societies, and the world, and, thereby, hopefully, improve people's individual and collective lives. These course goals are accomplished by (a) discussing ACR principles and practices, (b) reading (exemplary) ACR studies, and (c) completing written and oral ACR assignments.

Course Website

The Canvas course website contains the syllabus, all of the required readings listed below, and virtually all of the additional journal articles cited in the appendix; if needed, readings will be added as the semester progresses.

Course Schedule

January 16 Introduction to the Course

January 23 Introduction to Applied Communication Research

A. Readings: Conceptual Essays

Cissna, K. N. (1982). Editor's note: What is applied communication? Journal of Applied Communication Research, 10, iii–v. doi:10.1080/00909888209365216

B. Assignments: Come prepared to discuss:

1. Your view/definition of ACR and how, if at all, it differs from “nonapplied” communication research (or whatever term you would use to describe that research).
2. Frey and SunWolf’s (2009) observational–intervention ACR divide, including your position on it (currently and, potentially, in the future).
3. The problem, issue, and/or concern (hereafter, problem) that you will focus on in this course for relevant assignments. Find at least one source (scholarly or popular) that documents the scope/significance of that problem, and start thinking about how that problem could be addressed from a communication perspective.

January 30 Theory in Applied Communication Research

A. Readings

1. Conceptual Essays

- Barge, J. K., & Craig, R. T. (2009). Practical theory in applied communication scholarship. In L. R. Frey & K. N. Cissna (Eds.), Routledge handbook of applied communication research (pp. 55–78). New York, NY: Routledge.

- Seibold, D. R. (1995). Theoria and praxis: Means and ends in applied communication research. In K. N. Cissna (Ed.), Applied communication in the 21st century (pp. 23–38). Mahwah, NJ: Lawrence Erlbaum.

2. Research Study

- Villanueva, G., Gonzalez, G., Son, M., Moreno, E., Liu, W., & Ball-Rokeach, S. (2017). Bringing local voices into community revitalization: Engaged communication research in urban planning. Journal of Applied Communication Research, 45, 474–494. doi:10.1080/00909882.2017.1382711 (Vincent Russell)

3. Theory-driven Research Program Overview

- Hecht, M., & Miller-Day, M. (2010). “Applied” aspects of the drug resistance strategies project. Journal of Applied Communication Research, 38, 215–229. doi:10.1080/00909882.2010.490848 (Recipient of 2011 NCA ACD William F. Eadie Distinguished Article Award; EDAA)

B. Assignments: Come prepared to discuss:

1. Your definition/view of “theory.”
2. Issues raised in the conceptual essays, and your position, about the role of theory in ACR.
3. The research study assigned to Vincent, who will report on (7–10 minutes) and facilitate a discussion about it (10 minutes). In addition to explaining the applied communication study and providing no more than a one-page handout about it (use 1-inch margins on all sides of the page and 12-point Times New Roman font), in line with the purpose of this class session, the report should focus on how theory guided and/or emerged from the study, and pose some questions to facilitate a discussion regarding the role of theory in this ACR study and in ACR, more generally.

4. A testable applied communication proposition (e.g., hypothesis) about the problem that you are studying, as deduced from a (communication) theory of your choice.

February 6 Observational Applied Communication Research

A. Readings: Research Studies

- Adelman, M. B., & Frey, L. R. (1994). The pilgrim must embark: Creating and sustaining community in a residential facility for people with AIDS. In L. R. Frey (Ed.), Group communication in context: Studies of natural groups (pp. 3–22). Hillsdale, NJ: Lawrence Erlbaum. (Recipient of 1994 NCA ACD Distinguished Book Award and 1995 Gerald R. Miller Book Award, NCA Interpersonal and Small Group Interaction Division)
- Frey, L. R., Adelman, M. B., Flint, L. J., & Query, J. L., Jr. (2000). Weaving meanings together in an AIDS residence: Communicative practices, perceived health outcomes, and the symbolic construction of community. Journal of Health Communication, 5, 53–72. doi:10.1080/108107300126759
- Russell, L. D. (2013). Reconstructing the “work ethic” through medicalized discourse on workaholism. Journal of Applied Communication Research, 41, 275–292. doi:10.1080/00909882.2013.825046 (Boushra Batlouni)

B. Assignments: Come prepared to discuss:

1. Potential strengths and limitations of observational ACR.
2. The research study assigned to Boushra, who will report on (7–10 minutes) and facilitate a discussion (10 minutes) about it. In addition to explaining the study and providing no more than a one-page handout about it, in line with the purpose of this class session, the report should focus on the observational (and recommendation) nature of this study, and pose some questions that facilitate a class discussion about observational (and recommendation) ACR, with regard to this study and more generally.
3. A proposed way to conduct observational ACR about the problem that you are studying, and a hypothetical recommendation(s) that might emerge from that research.

B. Assignments: Come prepared to discuss:

1. Issues raised in the readings about engaged communication scholarship (the first four essays) and about translating/disseminating ACR (the last three essays).
2. Read and compare Harris’s (2018) journal article with its translational version in Communication Currents (n.d.; <https://www.natcom.org/communication-currents>), NCA’s online resource that “explains scholarly information in straightforward language geared for broad audiences, including communication experts working with laypeople, instructors and students, the press, and other interested members of the public” (para. 1).

3. Based on research that you conducted (e.g., hypothetically, over a longitudinal time period) about the problem that you are studying, translational products (other than an Op-Ed) that you could create and disseminate to practitioner and/or lay audiences.
4. The Op-Ed writing assignment.

February 20 Engaged Scholarship II: Making a Difference via Intervention Applied
Communication Research & Communication and Social Justice Research

A. Readings

1. Conceptual Essays

- Smarandache, F., & Vlăduțescu, Ș. (2014). Towards a practical communication intervention. Revista de Cercetare și Interventie Sociala [Review of Research and Social Intervention], 46(September), 243–254. Retrieved from <http://www.rcis.ro>

B. Assignments: Come prepared to discuss:

1. Issues raised in the conceptual essays about intervention ACR, in general, and social justice communication research interventions, in particular.
2. Differences between researchers observing others' interventions (Matsaganis & Golden, 2015; Tully, 2014) and researchers intervening, and differences between researchers' social justice interventions (Conquergood, 1988; Connaughton et al., 2017) and other interventions (Banerjee & Greene, 2007)
3. The research study assigned to Chelsea, who will report on (7–10 minutes) and facilitate a discussion about it (10 minutes). In addition to explaining the study and providing no more than a one-page handout about it, in line with the purpose of this class session, the report should focus on Conquergood's social justice interventions, and pose some questions to facilitate a discussion of his interventions and in ACR, more generally.
4. A hypothetical (but realistic) intervention that you could design and study to address the problem that you are investigating.
5. Whether you would categorize the problem that you are studying as a "social justice" problem, and, regardless of that categorization, a communication and social justice study that you could conduct regarding that problem.

February 27 Communication Activism for Social Justice Research and Teaching: A Conversation with Dr. Stephen Hartnett (University of Colorado Denver) and Dr. David Palmer (University of Northern Colorado)

B. Assignments: Come prepared to discuss:

1. Qualitative methods explicated in the conceptual essays and employed in the ACR studies.
2. Potential strengths and limitations of using qualitative methods in ACR.
3. The research studies assigned to Audra, Emily, and Michelle, who will report on (7–10 minutes) and facilitate a discussion (10 minutes) about the study. In addition to explaining the study and providing no more than a one-page handout about it, in line with the purpose of this class session, the report should focus on the qualitative method(s) employed in the study and pose some questions that facilitate a discussion of that method(s) in the study and in applied communication research, more generally.

4. A qualitative method(s) that could be used in your proposed ACR study and useful data that it might produce.

B. Assignments: Come prepared to discuss:

1. Quantitative methods explicated in the conceptual essays and employed in the ACR studies.
2. Potential strengths and limitations of using quantitative methods in ACR.
3. The research study assigned to Sara who will report on (7–10 minutes) and facilitate a discussion (10 minutes) about the study. In addition to explaining the study and providing no more than a one-page handout about it, in line with the purpose of this class session, the report should focus on the quantitative method employed in the study, and pose some questions to facilitate a discussion of that method in the study and its use in ACR, more generally.
4. A quantitative research method(s) that could be used in your proposed ACR study and useful data that it might produce, as well as qualitative and quantitative methods that could be used together in that study, and useful data that might be produced

B. Assignment: Come prepared to talk about writing the ACR prospectus.

May 1 Applied Communication Research Prospectus Presentations

BA–MA Coursework

A. Papers

1. Description/Explanation of Problem/Issue/Concern and Justification of Study (12.5% of course grade; due February 6): Choose a real-world problem/issue/concern (hereafter, problem) to examine and write a paper of no more than 1,000 words that describes it, documents its scope/significance, and explains and justifies briefly your study of it as ACR. Essentially, this paper constitutes the introduction to the ACR prospectus (minus an overview of how the prospectus is structured).
2. Op-Ed (15%; paper due February 20; oral discussion, March 6): Write an Op-Ed (Opposite the Editorial page; approximately 500–700 words; check specific newspaper requirements) about the problem that you are studying for this course that incorporates at least one (if possible/available, communication) research study/finding, and submit the Op-Ed to a U.S. newspaper before this class session (and copy me on that email submission).

3. Select one of the following assignments (17.5%; due March 20):
- A) Applied Communication Field Experience: Contract a local group or organization that is confronting the problem that you are studying for the course and (a) become a volunteer with that organization (at least go through any volunteer training) and/or (b) observe the organization (to the extent possible) and interview a couple of its members. Write a paper that examines communication strategies/practices employed by that group or organization, and whether and how research informed those strategies/practices explicitly (or, if research was not used explicitly, how it could have been used and whether the strategies/practices were in line with research findings).
 - B) Applied Communication Book Review: Choose a recent book that is relevant to applied communication scholarship (you must get my permission regarding its relevance) and write a review that could, and, hopefully, will be published in a communication journal.
 - C) NCA Applied Communication Division or Activism and Social Justice Division Panel: Construct a panel, complete the paperwork, and submit it (deadline is March 27) to one of these NCA divisions for consideration. Write a paper that describes, explains, and justifies that panel that appears.
 - D) Applied Communication Commentary: Write and submit to Communication Currents a rapid-response commentary that “provide[s] NCA members, teachers, students, and service communities with short information briefs intended to help make sense of unfolding public events while also advancing both our core values and our public profile as an organization” (see <https://www.natcom.org/communication-currents/current-commentary>).
4. Applied Communication Research Prospectus (35%; 30% written, 5% oral; paper due May 1; oral presentations, May 1): Propose a research study about the problem that you are studying that includes an introduction, review of literature, research questions/hypotheses/foci, methods, relevant ethical issues, conclusion, and references.
- B. Participation (20%): The course demands a substantial amount of class participation. You will, for example, report on and facilitate a discussion about an ACR study. Participation also includes contributing to class discussions by offering your opinions and asking questions. Participation does not mean that you should talk for the sake of talking; it means being an active contributor. Of course, you cannot participate if you do not attend class sessions, so please try not to miss any classes; however, because unexpected events occur, everyone is entitled to one absence without any penalty.

PhD Coursework

A. Papers

1. Description/Explanation of Problem/Issue/Concern and Justification of Study (15% of course grade; due February 6)
2. Op-Ed (15%; paper due February 20; oral discussion, March 6)
3. Applied Communication Comprehensive Examination (20%; 15% written, 5% oral): On Friday, March 22 (at 1:00 pm), you will be sent a comprehensive examination question about ACR and must email me the answer by Saturday, March 23 at 11:59 pm. You will defend your written answer orally on April 3.
4. Applied Communication Research Prospectus (35%; 30% written, 5% oral; paper due May 1; oral presentations, May 1)

B. Participation (15%)

University of Colorado Boulder Notes (Arranged alphabetically)

- A. Accommodation for Disabilities: If you qualify for accommodations because of a disability, please submit to me in a timely manner your accommodation letter from Disability Services, so that your needs can be addressed. Disability Services determines accommodations based on documented disabilities in the academic environment. Information on requesting accommodations is located on the Disability Services website (www.colorado.edu/disabilityservices/students). Contact Disability Services at (303) 492-8671 or dsinfo@colorado.edu. If you have a temporary medical condition or injury, see Temporary Medical Conditions (<https://www.colorado.edu/disabilityservices/students/temporary-medical-conditions>) under the Students tab on the Disability Services website.
- B. Classroom Behavior: Students and faculty each have responsibility for maintaining an appropriate learning environment. Those who fail to adhere to such behavioral standards may be subject to discipline. Professional courtesy and sensitivity are especially important with respect to individuals and topics dealing with (in alphabetical order) age, color, creed, disability, gender identity, gender expression, national origin, political affiliation or philosophy, pregnancy, race, religion, sex, sexual orientation, and veteran status. Course rosters are provided to me with the student's legal name. I gladly will honor your request to address you by an alternate name or gender pronoun. Please advise me of this preference early in the semester so that I may make appropriate changes to my records. For more information, see the policies on classroom behavior

(<https://www.colorado.edu/policies/student-classroom-and-course-related-behavior>) and the Student Code of Conduct (<https://www.colorado.edu/osccr>).

- C. Honor Code: All students enrolled in a CU-Boulder course are responsible for knowing and adhering to the Honor Code. Violations of the policy may include: plagiarism, cheating, fabrication, lying, bribery, threat, unauthorized access to academic materials, clicker fraud, submitting the same or similar work in more than one course without permission from all course instructors involved, and aiding academic dishonesty. All incidents of academic misconduct will be reported to the Honor Code (honor@colorado.edu; 303-735-2273). Students who are found responsible for violating the academic integrity policy will be subject to nonacademic sanctions from the Honor Code, as well as academic sanctions from me. (For additional information regarding the Honor Code, see <https://www.colorado.edu/osccr/honor-code>).
- D. Religious Holidays: Campus policy regarding religious observances requires that faculty members make every effort to deal reasonably and fairly with all students who, because of religious obligations, have conflicts with scheduled examinations, assignments, and/or required attendance. In this course, I will make every effort to accommodate students who have such conflicts with scheduled assignments and/or attending class sessions, provided students inform me well in advance of the scheduled conflict. If an assignment is due on a religious holiday, it can be due on another day. Class sessions missed to observe religious holidays will not be counted as absences with regard to the participation grade, as long as I am informed about that absence ahead of time. For full details, see the campus policy regarding religious observances (<https://www.colorado.edu/policies/observance-religious-holidays-and-absences-classes-andor-exams>).
- E. Sexual Misconduct, Discrimination, Harassment, and/or Related Retaliation: CU-Boulder is committed to fostering a positive and welcoming learning, working, and living environment. CU-Boulder will not tolerate acts of sexual misconduct (including sexual assault, exploitation, harassment, dating or domestic violence, and stalking), discrimination, and harassment by members of our community. Individuals who believe that they have been subject to misconduct or retaliatory actions for reporting a concern should contact the Office of Institutional Equity and Compliance (OIEC) at (303) 492-2127 or cureport@colorado.edu. Information about the OIEC, university policies, anonymous reporting (https://cuboulder.qualtrics.com/SE/?SID=SV_0PnqVK4kkIJZnf&Q_JFE=0&Q_SE=MF Bu) and campus resources can be found at the OIEC website (<https://www.colorado.edu/institutionalequity>).
